Here are a few tips to help you maximize your learning experience—and to help you enrich your English vocabulary for your writing and research projects:

Look up a word, learn it forever. Have a word you'd like to learn? Look it up in our dictionary and click the "learn" button — We'll add it to your customized learning program. Want to improve your overall vocabulary? Start playing Vocabulary.com daily, and we'll automatically find words at your level that you need to learn.

Make a list, then learn it! Create a list of words that you need to study and we'll help you learn them. Do a practice session to brush-up your knowledge before a quiz, or try a spelling bee.

Find a list to learn. Search our list library, and you'll find thousands of ready-made vocabulary lists that cover everything from current events, to standardized tests (like the SAT), and most popular literature.

Chart your progress. Want to see how far you've come? Visit the My Progress section of our website to see all the words you've mastered and achievements you've earned. Here, you can also view your trouble words and tailor the words in your personal learning program.

Join the competition! Check out our leaderboards to see how you stack up against other Vocabulary.com players. If you're a student in the U.S. or Canada, you can add your school to your profile. Every word you master will bring your school one step closer to winning this year's Vocabulary Bowl.

Visit our Help Center. Have more questions? Check out our extensive Help Center for answers to the most common questions about Vocabulary.com.
